

March 21, 2016

To whom it may concern,

This letter is in reference of Eric Le Fort of whom I have had the pleasure of working with over the past 3 years. I have known Eric since the first year of our university careers and have worked with him both on school work and extracurricular endeavours.

There are many reasons I have specifically chosen to work with Eric on many projects. One of which is his leadership abilities. He has shown over and over again that he has great insight into how to manage resources, responsibilities and people. This has manifested itself in impressive assignment grades and amazing projects. Another reason is his work ethic. I have personally seen him stay up for over 36 hours in order to deliver an amazing project. This has allowed me to faithfully place my trust in him as I know he will put in a tremendous effort despite hardship or problems. Lastly I would like to take note of his problem solving abilities. He has continuously shown to be adamant about solving issues and have the analytical talent to be very effective at solving complex problems. I have seen him solve problems on varying levels of scale from minuscule errors in code to large problems among members of a team.

These are a few but major reasons Eric Le Fort has always been and currently is one of the few people I immediately look for when starting new endeavours.

Regards,

Christopher McDonald

Student | Software Engineering & Management IV

McMaster University

Tel: 905-966-0723

Chris.McDonald12@outlook.com